Frequently Asked Questions

What can I do to give the person I am nominating the best chance to be recognized?

- The Order is merit-based. Try to include as much info as you can, the more facts and dates you include, the easier it will be for the Council when they review.
- Support letters are very important, please let the references know their letters are a key part of the review.

What happens after I submit a nomination?

- You will receive an acknowledgment that the nomination has been received and the date of the next Council meeting.
- The Council will advise both successful and unsuccessful candidates once the decisions are made.

Who decides the outcome of a nomination?

- The Honours Advisory Council considers all nominations individually and then collectively before submitting their recommendations to the Commissioner of the NWT.
- The Council must all agree on each nomination and their deliberations are confidential.

Why are some nominations unsuccessful?

- The Council receives several nominations per year and only (up to) 3 people can be chosen each year.
- If a nomination is unsuccessful, it doesn't mean they haven't made a positive contribution to the NWT. There are several factors that might influence success, some listed below:
 - The level of support provided by the support letters
 - The length of time they have been making their contribution to the community/territory
 - If their contributions were part of working life, or if it extended outside of that as well
 - Possible findings against the person nominated identified at the time the nomination

Can an unsuccessful nomination be reviewed?

- Unfortunately, there is not an appeal process for the Order of the Northwest Territories.
- There is no limit to how many times a person can be nominated. The Council encourages unsuccessful nominees to submit the nomination in future years.

What happens when a person becomes a Member of the Order of the NWT?

- The Commissioner will invite the successful nominations to a special ceremony where they are presented with an insignia and are formally invested into the Order.
- New members also receive a lapel pin and a Certificate of Appointment.
- Members are entitled to use the post-nominal letters O.N.W.T. after their names.
